

Higher Education (HE) modules

Some universities offer students the opportunity to undertake standalone degree modules. These are the same level of difficulty as the modules taught in the first year of a degree, and are an excellent way for someone to demonstrate to admissions tutors that they will be able to cope with studying at degree level.

In York, standalone HE modules are offered at the Centre for Lifelong Learning (at the University of York). Some of the modules are 'just for fun' but others are 'accredited'.

Accredited modules are worth 10 or 20 credits (a full honours degree is worth 360 credits). Accredited modules can be built up to enable students to gain either 60 or 120 credits, which can facilitate progression at a higher level within a degree pathway.

The Centre for Lifelong Learning courses typically last for 10–11 weeks, with attendance required for 2-3 hours a week (sometimes during the day and sometimes during the evening).

Courses start at the beginning of each term (September/October, January and April), and are offered in a wide range of subject areas, including arts and humanities, creative writing, psychology, social sciences and archaeology.

Most courses range between £110 and £185. You may be eligible for a reduced fee if you are in receipt of certain benefits.

See the Centre for Lifelong Learning website for more information: www.york.ac.uk/lifelonglearning

Want to find out about HE study?

visit www.higheryork.org

www.higheryork.org

 contactus@higheryork.org

 01904 876350

for schools
for individuals
for employers